INTRODUCTION

Dear John CEOExec, this report will show findings in comparison to your peer group. Your peer group being companies that are of a similar size and in the same organizational phase.

Our understanding, however, is that almost all organizations undergo the same phases and challenges. It's usually when those challenges have been accomplished, with the right people in the right seats, implementing a clear strategy and execution design, with sufficient funds and ideal leadership that the organization is ready for further growth and Scaling Up.

Now let's turn to you. You are 60 years old, have been an entrepreneur for 20 years, have a 15 -year-old company. Your company is active in Consultancy, research and other business services. You have thus gained more entrepreneurial experience outside this company. You have 2 partners. This usually makes doing business easier, if you at least agree on the long-term goals and have a clear division of activities. You have 100 permanent employees in service and 15 temporary employees on contract. You have a sales goal of 28 million for this year. You have a healthy ratio between sales and number of employees. This is a good starting point for further growth.

As indicated, and given the number of employees, you are probably in the Delegation phase. From this phase on, you (hopefully) have an efficient leadership team in place. You have more time and you can focus on the really important things again. One of the pitfalls is that you keep dealing with operational management tasks too much. The entrepreneur must "lead," that is, ensure that the entire leadership team and the entire company keeps focusing on the main goal. Often, it is good for the entrepreneur to take a step back and primarily focus on the future of the company.

For this year, your growth objective is 12% growth. For next year, your objective is 7%. You have a fair growth ambition for the year ahead. Other entrepreneurs within your peer group have an average growth ambition of 67.9%. You will get 10 % of your revenue from abroad. A part of your total sales is already comprised of international sales. That's good. This may be the right direction for continued growth. Further, you have the ambition to enter 5 new countries: that is an admirable goal that has the potential to considerably boost growth. This could boost your growth considerably.

What is the ScaleUp Score? The ScaleUp Score is based upon and calculated using all assessment items, including ambition and past growth. You gain bonus points if you perform well on challenges that rank highly in shaping your future growth. The maximum score is 100.

John CEOExec, your current ScaleUp Score is 47.

Your estimation: 50. The average Score for comparable companies is 55.1. So 69% of comparable companies score higher. You are pretty well on the way to becoming a strong growth organization. Compliments. In the following growth report, you can read where your areas for improvement are.

We begin with an overview on the main sections. The score is a weighted average of the questions per section. Your results are compared with your peer group.

Leadership team and Strategy rank highest.
Leadership team and Strategy rank lowest.

What are Peers? Peers are companies with a comparable size who have preceeded you in taking the Scaling Up Assessment. The database contains thousands of other growth companies.

In comparison to your peers, your scores for Leadership team and Internal communication are relatively good. However, Finance and cash and Scalability, technology and innovation show a lower than average score.

PEERS AND COMPARISONS

Below you will find a comparison between outcomes in the ScaleUp Score between you and other entrepreneurs. You will find the average scores of entrepreneurs with specific characteristics (growth, company age, having a mentor, reading management books, the gender of the entrepreneur and a selection of companies in your own industry). You might stumble upon some interesting findings.

PEOPLE

People - without a doubt the key to success within your organization. Every management book, academic study and personal story relays the same message. So, in your case John CEOExec, let's ask that key question: Are all your employees happy and engaged in the business? And would you 'rehire' all of them?

The success and scalability of your organization is mainly determined by the success that you have recruiting, training, involving, motivating and growing the best people you can find. And this can never be based on luck. Real success is based upon a philosophy around people, core values, the company culture, introduction program, continuous training and reward.

Note on reading the tables on the following pages

In the team score, the dark bar is the lowest score, the light bar is the highest score. The black stripe is the average score of the leadership team members. The number is the average score.

People

Companies that nail this are usually the winners in their industry. Let's take a look at how you compare:

YOUR EMPLOYEES

The average score for this section is 47.2. Your average score is 40. Therefore, on average you are doing under your peer group.

Effective recruitment process

In order to grow, you continuously need new - and good - people. This is often one of the most important challenges for a growth entrepreneur. You indicate that when it comes to finding new employees you find this difficult. Ultimately, this is a matter of process, attention and time, often especially on the part of the entrepreneur. How much time do you spend on this? More than one day per week?

High staff retention

Your employee turnover is relatively high. Unwanted turnover is often a sign that processes, strategy or management are not in order. It takes an enormous amount of money and effort to continually find and train new employees. Find out what the reasons are, hold exit interviews and ask yourself whether you yourself would want to work at your company.

Onboarding program

Not all employees receive an onboarding program at your company. That really is necessary with a company of your size. A well-thought-out onboarding program will be an enormous help to employees with regard to learning their jobs, becoming familiar with the company's core values and getting to know their coworkers. It will also help with scaling up your company. We recommend that you start taking steps toward this

People

Measuring employee satisfaction

You don't yet systematically measure employee satisfaction. Your company is in the phase where you need to have a systematic understanding of what's going on among your employees. An employee survey is probably a good start in this respect.

Positive about re-hiring employees

You would hire few of your current employees again. Ouch. This means that you have either postponed a lot of difficult decisions or you simply have a very bad hiring or development policy. You should work on this, because without good employees you can't grow.

Every employee has a training plan

Management thinker Tom Peters stated in his latest book 'one of the greatest responsibilities of an employer nowadays is the continuous development of employees'. In fast growing companies, roles are continuously changing, the need for training and education is therefore imperative. You have this partially executed. You might want to start thinking about bringing it up to par.

People

Outsourcing / Offshoring operations

You are somewhat active with offshoring or outsourcing, this strategy is completely depending on your product/service, cost and scaling strategy

We apply flat-management or self-steering/organizing teams

You have somewhat implemented new management models. With your company size it is risky to experiment. Please note that changing management models often has great impact on people and culture. Mostly positive, but not always.

People

COMPANY CULTURE

The average score for this section is 31.3. Your average score is 25. Therefore, on average you are doing under your peer group.

We have Core values

Core values are the internal 'rules of the game'. It's essential to have absolute clarity on this if you start or continue to grow rapidly. In your phase it's necessary to have a clearer picture on the core values, especially if you regularly hire new people. You have started on this. Finish, refine and communicate, is what we recommend.

We have focus on customers' needs

Growth often creates increased management attention to internal matters, employees, new premises, computer systems, etc. The most rapidly growing and successful companies keep a sharp focus on the continuously (changing) needs of the customer. Making and keeping this focus and attention explicit is important, especially in this phase of your company.

Employees know core values

You have formulated core values; however, if these are not paid continuous attention - especially when you grow and regularly hire employees - these will not be effective. In your phase, it's really essential to work hard on this. Start with regular communication and create dialogue around these core values.

We are transparent

Transparency of information (about customers, sales, goals, growth, etc.) produces greater employee involvement. In addition, it often prevents internal "politics". It would be good if you could start thinking about what information you are even more willing to share.

We have a positive and healthy culture

"Culture eats Strategy for breakfast" is a famous quote from management guru Peter Drucker. The outside world is changing rapidly, but a positive and healthy culture in which employees take responsibility, think along and always act in the interest of the company is therefore an enormous "asset". Given your size, it is very important that you quickly start working on such a culture even more consciously.

Strategy

Articulating a clear and differential strategy, supported by a strong core culture that can deliver on the brand's promises, is the key for any company that wants to scale up. So how do you know if you have this industry dominating strategy? Sustainable top-line revenue growth and an increasing gross margin are the two key financial indicators. If you don't have a killer strategy your company will slowly face continuous pricing pressures as the market commoditizes your products and services.

John CEOExec, to have such a strong and effective strategy, it is key that the leadership team has a system and process to devote time and attention to this. A strong strategy needs a very clear and compelling vision and long term goal (BHAG). It needs to be specific and clear on which clients you want to service, how you will be unique and that your competences are clearly aligned with that goal. You then need clear measureable (non financial) yearly and quarterly goals. And a process needs to be in place to review and discuss trends and information from employees, clients and the market in general. Information on competition, technologies and potential disrupters needs to be part of the periodic strategic assessment.

And a strategy works best when all employees know it, understand it and are motivated by it.

Let's look at your results.

Strategy

GOALS AND STRATEGY

The average score for this section is 33.1. Your average score is 35. Therefore, on average you are doing better than your peer group.

We have formulated a long term (non-financial) goal

You have not yet formulated a clear long-term goal, but you have begun to do so. That's great, because a long-term goal provides direction and context and above all motivation for all employees. Companies that do this effectively are at an enormous advantage. Good luck formulating your goal!

We have formulated yearly goals

You do not yet formulate clear, measurable annual goals. The clearer and more measurably you formulate your goals (both financially and organizationally or with regard to product or market development), the higher the chance that you will also achieve those goals. This will have a clarifying and motivating effect and ensure growth. Given the size of your company, we recommend that you implement this as soon as possible.

We have formulated quarterly/ monthly goals (other than financial goals)

You have started setting measurable monthly or quarterly goals. Given the size of your company, it's important to continue to implement this quickly. After all, monthly or quarterly goals give you guidance and ensure that you will achieve your annual goals. Think of them as "small sprints" that you have to win in order to achieve your annual goal. Fast growers are very disciplined in this process.

We work with a strategic plan

You have started putting together a business plan. Given the size of your company this seems quite late. Establishing your goals, strategy and action plan can bring about a lot of clarity and teach you to anticipate certain challenges. When should you hire someone? What will the marketing strategy be? You have to make many difficult choices; a complete overview and plan will help you with this, including in the financial aspect.

Each employee has personalized goals

You have started working on personal goals; that's good. Team goals and personal goals are the next step in working efficiently. This creates clarity, commitment, personal responsibility and motivation. Good luck working out your personal goals in further detail.

We have implemented a growth methodology

You have somewhat implemented a growth methodology. The larger you grow, the more difficult it is to implement new ways of working. Now would be the time to speed up implementation of the type of leadership, systems and processes that will propel your growth.

Strategy

We have an active acquisitions strategy

You are somewhat active with acquisitions or maybe you are considering it. Please understand that acquisitions consume much leadership time and attention. Note that 70% of the acquisitions turns out to be disappointing.

Execution

EXECUTION

Execution is, in many organizations, the biggest challenge. Where most entrepreneurs have a natural passion for clients, product development and innovation, many of them lack the skills and intrinsic motivation for a flawless and scalable execution. Execution and operations are broad areas and its success is dependent from many factors. But let us first distinguish leadership and management. As the entrepreneur of the organization, the focus lies on leadership, with the key objective being emotional involvement in the long and short term vision of the company across all employees. Management however is focused on process. The right people doing the right things right. And do all processes run without drama and drive industry-leading profitability? The entrepreneur does not have to be the person to manage this. An operations director, COO, or well functioning management team are, in many situations, the critical people to get this right.

Execution success is dependent on many factors. A well functioning leadership team, with a disciplined process and rhythm for prioritization and goalsetting. Clear KPIs, measurement systems, a process for employee and client feedback. Automation and digitalization of primary and secondary processes and so on.

We have put the sales and marketing function also in this chapter, as we see the systematic organization of these processes as part of the execution.

OK, let's see how you scored:

Execution

LEADERSHIP TEAM

The average score for this section is 11.9. Your average score is 20. Therefore, on average you are doing better than your peer group.

Tasks are properly allocated

You do not yet have an efficient leadership team. That's very problematic in your phase. Decisions must increasingly be discussed, made, accounted for and above all implemented by the group. Now you are doing most of it yourself, which places unjustified pressure on you as an entrepreneur, manager and leader.

We have weekly management meetings.

You occasionally have meetings with your leaders. This seems very unusual given the size of your company. You should implement a set schedule and systematically make all decisions. Having regular weekly meetings with your most important leaders is essential for making the right decisions together and monitoring progress.

We have periodic strategic sessions.

You occasionally have sessions where you develop longer-term plans. Regular mutual consultation about the strategic direction of the company often leads to more effective operations, wider acceptance of decisions and therefore growth.

Leadership team receives regular training

Training and education for your organization's leadership team is not yet in order. It's time to improve this situation.

Execution

OPERATIONAL PROCESSES

The average score for this section is 25.8. Your average score is 25. Therefore, on average you are doing under your peer group.

Our goals are translated into clear KPIs

You have already started working on making your goals measurable. That's great; this is an important step towards creating personal accountability and professionalizing processes. This includes numbers of leads, received applications, IT development, etc. This can be especially important if you grow, in order to keep everything under control.

We use real-time data to measure our performance

You have started creating accurate data for guiding your company. That's good, but you should continue down this path because otherwise this will likely increasingly lead to mistakes, wrong decisions and problems and later - if you continue to grow - you'll inevitably end up in trouble.

We grow with limited mistakes, errors and problems

You have started coordinating and standardizing, but things still go wrong on a regular basis. It's time to pay even more attention to taking stock of processes and making clear agreements. This is necessary for handling the next growth phase. Scalability is created by standardization, among other things.

We measure customer satisfaction

You have started occasionally measuring your customers' satisfaction. That's great. Try to "institutionalize" this process and see what you can improve every day, week or month.

We have systematic processes for continuous improvement

You are already doing something in the area of quality management, and that's good. At your level it's good to structure work processes and set up a system of quality checks and customer feedback. Preventing mistakes is usually significantly cheaper than continually fixing them.

Execution

SALES AND MARKETING

The average score for this section is 27.5. Your average score is 25. Therefore, on average you are doing under your peer group.

We have an effective lead generation process

You have already started a lead generation process. That's a good initiative. With a company of your size, allowing the acquisition of new customers to only depend on the entrepreneur or on coincidence is dangerous. For continued growth, it would be wise to implement an effective process and system for this.

Sales achievement

Having and achieving targets is, of course, the basis for business success and growth. At successful companies this correlation is no coincidence. The sales process will often consist of a combination of targets, bonus schemes, lead generation as well as weekly meetings, coaching, training, motivational sessions, etc. It might be good to think about how you can improve this at your company.

Weekly sales meeting

Stimulating sales is hardly possible without a disciplined process. A weekly sales meeting in which successes as well as setbacks and lessons learned are shared is an important part of the success of fast-growing companies. Often there are also one-on-one meetings with individual sales reps - if applicable. It's time to quickly get this to a higher level.

Head of sales is not the entrepreneur

Also, you can only commit your time once as an entrepreneur. That also applies to sales management. With the increasing pressure on general management tasks, it's good to ensure that you as an entrepreneur free up sufficient time for this. If this is not the case, you will have to start making choices.

We have an effective PR/communication strategy

Nowadays sales and marketing strategies are usually accompanied with an effective content-based communication strategy. You might want to think about implementing this a bit stronger.

Execution

SCALABILITY, TECHNOLOGY AND INNOVATION

The average score for this section is 39.5. Your average score is 30. Therefore, on average you are doing under your peer group.

Most processes are automated

In order to scale, smart application and linking of information technology is essential. Sales, marketing, project management, production, human resources, reporting, etc. This gives structure and clarity, prevents mistakes and makes growing a lot easier. You have partial automation and a lot of systems probably still work independently of each other. However, with the size of your company, you will quickly have to start thinking about smart (integrated) solutions.

Systems prepped for growth

If you grow, a lot changes at the same time: systems, structures, people, processes, etc. It helps a lot when your systems can handle this growth. Otherwise it's sort of like changing the tires while driving! We advise you to quickly start "thinking ahead" in terms of structures and systems.

Better systems than competitors

Many fast growers have invested in information technology systems that help them be better, smarter, more efficient and more market-oriented than their competitors. You have few systems that are better than most of your competitors. Where might IT be able to help you?

Knowledge on latest technology

As an entrepreneur, you always have 1001 focus areas. You must keep an eye on technological developments that could enormously affect your business model or company efficiency. You could spend more time on this.

We are more innovative than competitors

In this world, where developments are super fast, you can quickly be made less relevant by a competitor if you don't pay attention (for example, by focusing too much on internal issues). It is wise to continuously make improvement and innovation part of the organization's DNA.

Our business model is disruptive

You have somewhat of a disruptive business model. That might gold. Further validation, speed and scaling up of the model are the things that now matter most.

Cash

FINANCE AND CASH

Growth sucks cash. This is the first law of entrepreneurial gravity. Yet many company leaders pay more attention to revenue and profit than they do to cash. And usually a company needs to be in severe cash crisis before predictive systems are implemented and the business model is optimized to be cash rich.

So the key question is: Do you have consistent cash sources, ideally internally generated, to fuel business growth?

Let's see how your are doing compared to your peers:

Cash

FINANCE AND CASH

The average score for this section is 38.1. Your average score is 25. Therefore, on average you are doing under your peer group.

Real time financial insights

You hardly have any up-to-date knowledge of sales and costs. For a growth company, this is the same as driving 90 mph with a blindfold on. Maybe this should be your first priority to tackle tomorrow.

Up-to-date cashflow planning

You don't employ strict cash flow planning. As a small business, you always have to look ahead a few months with regard to your cash flow, as otherwise you'll inevitably end up in trouble, especially if you grow.

Access to growth capital

You have no clear picture of your access to growth capital. This isn't a problem, unless you want to grow a lot. After all, growth gobbles up cash. You could create a list of the various alternatives (friends/fools/family, the bank, factoring, SME bonds, crowd funding, angel investors, private equity, Government Funding, etc.). There are a lot of service providers who can help you with this.

Financial alert function

It is crucial to have "early warning systems" with regard to financial parameters. The faster you can intervene or take measures, the better. You indicate that this is not always the case at your company. That's dangerous. What are you going to do about it?

Leadership understands balance sheet

Reading and understanding a balance sheet appears to be a tricky thing for many entrepreneurs. While a balance sheet is a smart blueprint that can expose the dynamics and growth potential behind your company. With a company of your size this is not a priority, but if you grow you should spend a good amount of time and attention on this.

You

YOU

Peter Drucker nailed it: "The Bottleneck is always on top of the bottle". We mentioned that people are the most critical factor in defining a company's success. We lied. It is, in fact, you, the entrepreneur, founder and leader. Therefore, the responsibility lies with this person in recruitment, motivation, training and overall involvement ensuring the business reaches a higher level.

In other words, your ambition level, energy, speeches, involvement and example behavior are the real key to scaling up. Interestingly, your behavior needs to adapt to cater for each new organizational phase. This requires growth and development from you, as the leader too. Continuously identifying what the organization needs from you. This starts with moving from working 'in' your company to working 'at' your company and usually ends with making sure that you let your professional management run the operations so you can build the organization even further.

Within this process one of the key areas of success is the level in which you involve your employees in the company vision and goals. Hence why we stress the importance of internal communication.

To continuously grow as a leader is challenging. Having a mentor or coach can be extremely beneficial in setting you on the right leadership development trajectory. Successful leaders are happy, have a good work-life balance, read a lot and learn from other entrepreneurs. Note, it is about the decisions you take, not the time that you put in.

John CEOExec, let's look at your results. We see that you have 20 years experience as an entrepreneur and that you have 2 partner(s) in your business.

You

YOUR LEADERSHIP

The average score for this section is 64.8. Your average score is 50. Therefore, on average you are doing under your peer group.

CEO works on the company and is able to remove from daily operations

In this phase you work in your company to a large extent. If you don't put in any time to work on your company as well (systems, structures, processes, management, etc.), then it will be difficult to grow. When do you start?

Have a mentor

You don't really have a permanent mentor. It can be difficult to see when you are stuck. Sometimes choices are a challenge, or you have simply reached the end of your tether. Maybe you need to change to guide the company to its next phase? Whatever it may be, this is where a mentor can be of great assistance.

Have an entrepreneurial network

Most entrepreneurs experience the same challenges, highs and lows. Other entrepreneurs you know can often be of great assistance with their experiences. We recommend that you actively look for and invest more time in a good network of entrepreneurs.

Enjoy management of company

You don't really like managing. Many entrepreneurs find out that managing people costs a lot of time and energy. With a company of your size you probably work with a management team and/or a second-in-command who is good in operations. The challenge is for you not to get in their way and to focus fully on the future of the company.

Energized by team and company

It is not unusual for entrepreneurs to become "sick" of their company after about seven years. Employees can change jobs or companies. Entrepreneurs can't. The best solution that doesn't cost money but does deliver is to let your company grow hard (again); then every year is different.

Absence of CEO is possible

You still can't leave without some things going wrong. You have made the company, the processes and the people too dependent on you. That's not scalable and causes you in particular a lot of work, stress and likely also annoyance. We recommend that you start working on standardization, establishing processes and probably also on hiring better people.

You

Read business books

You don't often read management books. That's a shame, because in order to grow it will be imperative to have skills, ideas and insights that were documented by others years ago. And don't forget: "stagnant water will stink." This also applies to businesses.

Receives regular education

You sporadically attend external education or training courses. That's too bad. Because even as an entrepreneur, you need to develop yourself. Often the entrepreneur him/herself is the most important part of the educational equation. Management guru Peter Drucker said: "The bottleneck is always on top of the bottle." In other words, keep developing yourself in order to let your organization grow.

Healthy work - life balance

You have a poor work-life balance. It is a challenge for many entrepreneurs to combine everything. Successful high-growth entrepreneurs teach us that we must always take good care of ourselves. Hard work is sometimes necessary, of course, but you should take enough time for yourself and not skip vacations. Working smart is the solution.

I am happy

You are somewhat not happy. If this feeling continues, talk to a mentor, another entrepreneur who has been in your shoes. Maybe entrepreneurship is not for you.

You

INTERNAL COMMUNICATION

The average score for this section is 26. Your average score is 30. Therefore, on average you are doing better than your peer group.

Employees know long term goal

A long-term goal for the organization gives everyone a clear framework for strategy and decisions - and can be very motivating. Good that you have started doing this. It's important for you to finish this quickly.

Employees know yearly goal

Focusing on goals, including annual goals, provides direction and a framework to your business activities. In addition, this information motivates your employees. Good that you have already started doing this; try to persevere and especially to communicate about this on a regular basis.

Employees know quarterly/monthly goals

Focusing on goals, including monthly goals and KPIs, provides guidance and direction to business activities. Actually, you make a small sprint every month to ensure that you are "on schedule". The clearer the goal the clearer it becomes on how to achieve it. Good that you have already started doing this. Hurry up and finish and implement it.

Employees know vision and mission

As with the long-term goal - it is important for the company's vision and mission to be clear. This motivates employees and provides a clear framework for the activities. It's good that you have started on this, but it's important to finish quickly.

Employees know elevator pitch

You'd be surprised to hear the stories and answers you get to the question "What exactly does your company do?". It is a good idea to formulate a common language and text - and to practice together. Everything will become clearer. Both internally as well as externally.

We frequently have company-wide meetings

Research shows that it's crucial to communicate goals and performance to all employees, providing them with context regarding development. Face-to-face, with internal sessions works best. With internal sessions, in other words. You are already doing this, but still not often enough. We recommend that you increase the frequency of the sessions.

IN CONCLUSION

You have a ScaleUp Score of 47, a great score. You are pretty well on the way to becoming a strong growth organization. You scored highest on Leadership team and lowest on Leadership team. In comparison to other companies, in the same phase, you score higher on Leadership team and lower on Finance and cash. Your biggest challenge - as you describe it - is "fsgsdfg". Hopefully this report has given you sufficient insight into where you and your organization can improve. Good luck and we'll see you back at this Scaling Up Assessment- perhaps for a higher score...
