

Two phases of the roadmap went live overnight

Yesterday's update ended with a phased roadmap built from your July 1 list. Since that update went out, two of those phases shipped to the live platform: the quick-fix batch (your wording and email items) and the new admin & coach controls. Everything below is shown the way you'd find it yourself — real screens captured on production this morning, with the one honest exception labeled as such.

Phase "Quick fixes" — your July 1 items, live

Five items from your list, shipped and verified on production yesterday afternoon. Each one shown as it renders today.

EditDuplicateDelete

Which employees have demonstrated that they live the core values? Why? Share the stories. (Story 3 of 3)

The "duplicate" QSP question — resolved without deleting anything. LIVE As flagged in yesterday's investigation, the survey deliberately carries three "share the stories" slots (that's how the original Esperto questionnaire works, and each slot's historical answers are mapped separately). Deleting one would have broken the import mapping — so the three slots now label themselves (Story 1 of 3), (Story 2 of 3), (Story 3 of 3). Respondents see immediately that it's intentional.

⋮ S3_LEADERSHIP_TEAM SLIDER_LIKERT Edit Duplicate Delete

⋮ S6_CORE_VALUES TEXT Edit Duplicate Delete
What are your core values? If not yet set, what do you think the top 3 should be?

Suzanne's wording fixes, in the live questionnaire. LIVE "Leadership Team" is now sentence-cased to match its 13 sibling factors, and the core-values question uses your suggested rewording — it no longer assumes a company has no values yet: "What are your core values? If not yet set, what do you think the top 3 should be?"

Hi Test,

You've been invited by Gabriel Test to complete the Quarterly Session Prep v2 for Test.

It takes just a few minutes, and there are no right or wrong answers — your honest perspective is what makes the results useful. Your responses are confidential.

Click the button below to begin.

Start the assessment

If the button doesn't work, paste this into your browser:

https://scaling-up-platform-v2.vercel.app/org-survey/test_qsp_v2_260702163027#t=J3xclQ...

— Scaling Up Platform

The invitation email your clients now receive — rendered by the exact same live email engine that sent the launch-test invitation (and matching the copy received in the test inbox July 2, byte for byte). LIVE Three of your four email asks in one frame: the coach's logo sits in the branded header, the body now says who invited them by name ("You've been invited by Gabriel Test..." — your coaches' names appear automatically), and the button is the large, unmissable version. The fourth ask — your revised body copy — drops straight in whenever you send it; the plumbing is already live.

BEFORE

"a responder has completed the assessment" — the email to the coach when someone finished, whenever the roster had no name on file.

AFTER — LIVE

"maria@clientco.com has completed the assessment" — when there's no name, every coach-facing surface (emails and on-screen reports) now shows the respondent's email instead. Respondents themselves never see this fallback — their own greeting stays warm.

The "a responder" fix, shown as copy rather than a screenshot — it only appears when a roster entry has a blank name, which no live campaign has today. The logic is live and test-covered on production.

PRIORITIES · ORG

What is in your opinion the most important thing to achieve the goals of the organization?

PRIORITIES · YEAR

What is in your opinion the most important thing to achieve this year's goals?

PRIORITIES · QUARTER

What is in your opinion the most important thing to achieve this quarter's goals?

Your #18 ("possible duplicate") — checked against the source: not a duplicate.

The original Esperto questionnaire asks the "most important thing" question three times on purpose, cascading from organization → year → quarter. All three exist in the source, so all three stay — same ruling as the story slots: faithful to the instrument, now visibly deliberate.

Phase "Admin & coach controls" — live last night

Your #1, #6 and #7, built and launched behind the usual safety switch. Below is the walkthrough, the way you or Suzanne would use each control.

Retire a template so nobody starts new campaigns on it (your #6)

Where you go: Assessments → Templates. Every template row now carries a Disable action — and this screenshot shows the real current state: Quarterly Session Prep v1 is already disabled (we retired it at launch, since v2 replaced it). Note its badge and the action flipped to Enable — one click undoes it, any time.

☐ Leadership Vision Alignment

A comprehensive assessment covering financials, strategy, culture, leadership, and execution to assess organizational readiness and alignment.

☐ Quarterly Session Prep v2

Extended quarterly assessment adding forward-looking priorities to the retrospective

☐ Rockefeller Habits Checklist

A good strategy falls apart if you don't make great Execution Decisions. Use the popular Rockefeller Habits Checklist to improve execution throughout your organization.

☐ Scaling Up Full Assessment

61-question assessment across People, Strategy, Execution, Cash, and You domains. Emits a per-domain score plus a 0-100 ScaleUp Score. Question content derived from the Scaling Up methodology by Verne Harnish.

☐ The Five Dysfunctions of a Team — Team Assessment

38-statement team assessment based on Patrick Lencioni's Five Dysfunctions of a Team. Measures trust, conflict, commitment, accountability, and results on a 1-5 scale. Reports a per-fundamental average score with High/Medium/Low interpretation.

And here's the effect, from a coach's seat — captured this morning logged in as a coach: the new-campaign template picker offers QSP v2, but v1 is simply gone. The platform also refuses v1 at the server if anything tries to sneak past the picker. Running v1 campaigns, their reports, and their history are untouched — retiring a template never breaks the past.

Where you go: any template's editor → Metadata → the Results Email card. The new switch — "Send results to respondents by default" — makes the wizard's results-email checkbox start pre-ticked for every new campaign on that template. Coaches keep the override: they can still untick it per campaign, which is exactly the shape you asked for. The hint below the switch is the one honest catch: the default kicks in once that template's results-email content is approved (the existing safety gate that stops unreviewed email copy going to clients).

Where you go: Admin Settings → Admin Users. The card now lists the actual admin accounts (not just invites) with their roles, and every row has Remove — except your own, so nobody can lock themselves out. Removal keeps all their history (everything they ever created stays attributed), and the email can be re-invited later if someone returns.

Remove gabriel+waveq-drill@chiefaiofficer.com? They are locked out immediately. Their history is kept and the email can be re-invited.

The Remove confirmation, verbatim — from last night's live drill on a throwaway account created just to be removed.

» probe: open the admin dashboard with each account's still-valid login session active admin session → 200 – dashboard renders removed admin session (same kind of session, minutes after removal) → 307 – thrown out to the login screen

The part you can't screenshot — proven on production. "Removed" would be hollow if a departed admin's already-logged-in browser kept working (sessions normally live 30 days). So we removed a real throwaway admin during the launch and probed both ways: a live admin's session renders the dashboard; the removed admin's identical session is rejected on its very next request. Lock-out is immediate — and deliberately not reversible by the emergency kill-switch: turning the feature off stops further removals, it never lets a removed person back in.

The roadmap, updated

Same phases as yesterday's update — two now stamped done, and the next two moved to the front.

Quick fixes from the July 1 list

DONE • LIVE JULY 2

Everything in the section above: story-slot labels, both wording fixes, the name fallback, coach name + logo + big button in invitation emails. One item stays open inside this phase — your revised invitation copy (#2.3) drops in the moment you send it.

Controls for admins & coaches

DONE • LIVE JULY 3

Results-email default with coach override, disable-a-template (QSP v1 already retired), remove-an-admin with immediate lock-out. All three walked through above.
